

STRESS E-BULLETIN: JUNE EDITION

++A BIG THANK YOU++

To those of you who answered the stress e-bulletin survey. After compiling your results and considering your suggestions/opinions, we will:

- Issue the stress e-bulletin monthly
- Keep the length roughly to 4 updates per bulletin
- Include more case studies and important updates

Many of you felt that the style of the e-bulletin wasn't very attractive. We face certain limitations in this area, as HSE uses text format for all of its e-bulletins.

Click here to find out more:

<http://www.hse.gov.uk/new/ebulletins/answers.htm>

We will try to make the current format as attractive as possible by using less text, more white space, snappy headlines and a 'read more' option.

HSE will run another survey in a few months and again we would appreciate your feedback.

++BUILDING THE BUSINESS CASE++

Securing management commitment prior to a stress risk assessment or policy launch can be a challenge for many organisations. CIPD have issued some helpful guidance about building the business case:

++THE REAL EFFECT OF STRESS++

We are due to launch some brand new case studies on the stress website, looking at how stress affects individuals. These will be online by the end of this week, but for now check out the existing case studies at:
